OLD BUSINESS

Councilman Kimbell submitted a written report of the Police and Fire Service Study Committee and suggested that no action be taken until the Council had time to study the report.

REPORT OF THE SPECIAL COMMITTEE ON POLICE AND FIRE DISTRICT EXPANSIONS TO THE INDIANAPOLIS CITY-COUNTY COUNCIL

Fire Services

Indianapolis is fortunate to enjoy the services of a first rate professional fire department in the central area, and well-organized and operated volunteer departments in the suburban areas. Given the legal requirements for annexation to the city fire district, it is needless to give much thought to expansion of the city fire service area. The volunteer departments give outstanding service at low cost, and there is no need to interrupt or alter the pattern of fire service in Marion County. Nevertheless, three conditions require the establishment of policy for future action on the part of the council.

Consideration of petitions for annexation to the fire special service district.

For various reasons, property owners may decide to present petitions for annexation into the fire special service district. The most obvious situation occurs when a businessman wishes to obtain a liquor license; present law unwisely dictates that such outlets must be located within the fire special service district. It would seem capricious to deny any property owner the right to exercise his options under the law and enter a successful petition for annexation. Furthermore, financial considerations indicate that the city fire department finds itself in a very tight revenue situation which makes such petitioned annexations very attractive as a means of spreading the burden of tax support for the city fire department. On the negative side are considerations of provision of fire protection to annexation sites which are not contiguous to the present fire service district and which are remote from existing IFD facilities. Also, annexation of suburban parcels to the city fire district removes that value from the tax base which supports, although at much lower rates, the activities of the volunteer departments.

It is suggested that non-contiguous annexation petitions related to liquor licenses be approved subject to agreement by all parties that the petitioner will enter into contract with the appropriate volunteer fire department for fire service, payable by the petitioner to the appropriate township fire unit in an amount equal to the assessed value of the property times the township fire rate.

Expansion of paid fire departments in suburban departments.

Although an immediate situation does not apply, it is conceivable that one or more townships may move in the direction of fully paid departments. Should this eventuate, we would recommend that a merger occur so that a proliferation of paid departments does not occur. A suggested guideline would be that, when the rate to support a fully paid suburban department reaches 75% of the rate for IFD, a merger will take place. We recommend such language to the Indiana General Assembly as a modification of the Unigov statute.

Shared services:

This committee recommends that certain services and support functions be shared by the various departments, both professional and volunteer, in Marion County. These would be:

Training—A new training facility is badly needed for all departments in the county. The investment should be made so that IFD could use the school during the day, and the volunteers at night. It should be paid for out of a county-wide fund.

Fire Prevention—Those suburban departments which do not want the added burden of providing a fire prevention bureau should contract this service with IFD. The tax support for the IFD fire prevention bureau should be made county-wide, perhaps by moving the bureau into the civil defense office of the division of buildings, DMD.

Communications—See separate section on emergency communications.

Police Services

The committee finds deficiencies in the present mode of providing police services to the people of Indianapolis and Marion County. The prime deficiency which demands immediate correction is the rancor and lack of cooperation, the public and childish bickering which divide the Indianapolis Police Department and the Marion County Sheriff's Department. This committee strongly criticizes those officials, both elected and appointed, who have allowed their petty differences to erupt in public print, to the definite detriment of sound law enforcement in the community.

The basic consideration, underlying the question of consolidation of police services, is the tax support used for the Indianapolis Police Department as compared to the tax support of the Marion County Sheriff's Department. Both departments are supported primarily by property tax collections: The rate for IPD in 1973 is $1.46 per hundred, while that used for the law enforcement activity of MCSD is about 10c per hundred. The IPD rate is paid only by the property owners of the police special service district, whereas the sheriff's department derives support from all property taxpayers, whether inside or outside the old city limits. In effect, this community supports two large police departments: one group of taxpayers pays for both but receives the services of only one, an obvious inequity. Should an immediate consolidation of IPD and MCSD occur, a reverse tax inequity would ensue; suburban residents would not a sharp increase in taxes for police services, while present police service district rates would drop significantly. While recognizing the present inequity, the committee rejects immediate and total annexation as a redress for the inequity. A more orderly, reasoned approach to annexation, based on service requirements is envisioned.

Without any other alternatives for funding equity or substantial tax support for police services, the committee finds that immediate and total annexation of the county to the police district would be improper. However, the eventual consolidation of police services, with the final development of a single, sophisticated, local law enforcement agency, is a principal which is fully supported by this committee.

The general rule of procedure which we recommend would be to annex areas to the police special service district as they demonstrate the need and requirement for intensive (as opposed to extensive) police patrol. The present ratio of full time, professional, public law officers in the police service district is 2.1 officers per 1,000 population; in the area services by MCSD, the ratio is .4 officers per 1,000. The comparison of crime statistics indicates that serious crime is accelerating in suburban Marion County, while the trend has been declining in the IPD district. This simply indicates that the growth areas for residential development lie primarily outside the police district, and that the incidence of crime is increasing with the growth of population. A recent performance study of various metropolitan areas conducted by the Council on Municipal Performance demonstrates that Indianapolis has the lowest ratio in the nation of crime incidence in the "inner city" as compared to "suburbia"; to state this statistical fact in another way, we have more crime in the suburbs in relation to crime in the city than any other major American city. This committee does not feel that the long range solution to this problem is the development of a second major police force, with all of the costly and sophisticated units and gear which this implies. Two police forces with headquarters only a block apart are not the answer to future law enforcement problems in Indianapolis.

Gradual consolidation.

The first step to determining which areas require greater concentration of patrol is a merging of the reporting functions of IPD and MCSD. This would require a consolidation of the jail and the city lock-up under the jurisdiction of the sheriff's department, and the total use of the police computer system by MCSD. Neither of these improvements would require significant cash outlay, and should be undertaken at once. A plan already exists, on paper and in detail, for the suggested merging of activities.

Once this consolidation were effected, the MCSD could adopt the computer supported grid system for reporting crime by location. High crime areas become immediately visible on a daily basis, making it possible to predict with some accuracy target neighborhoods and to assign patrol activity accordingly. Presently, MCSD has no capability for such techniques.

Standards could be developed by the police planning group which would indicate when a neighborhood or census tract had developed a serious need for intensive patrol. Several existing IPD police beats in outlying areas could be selected for the purposes of setting a standard for criminal activity and its relation to population density. When a given area—census tract, geographical entity, etc.—showed by the grid system of crime reporting that criminal activity exceeded the norm or standard, annexation to IPD should occur, with the proviso that improved police service would follow. Other considerations would be, of course, population density and geographical logic. The present boundaries of the Indianapolis Police District, most notably in northern Warren Township, are confusing and meandering. Special attention should be given these areas, once a sound system of crime reporting is developed.

Communications Center.

The committee finds that the communications need for emergency services in Indianapolis merit special mention. Due to the ever growing cost and sophistication of modern communications systems, with their reliance on computer for rapid, accurate locating service, the committee strongly recommends a single emergency communications center for police and fire services (except for the excluded cities). We recognize that each agency wishes to maintain its autonomy and independence, and many units have absolutely no interest in joining such a center. We would not recommend that any agency be forced to participate. However, we do recommend the creation of a new county-wide police-fire communications center operated under the jurisdiction of the Office of Civil Defense, Department of Public Safety. The IFP and IPD communications centers would be shut down and consolidated into the new center. All other safety departments would be allowed to utilize the facility without fee. The facility would be modern in every respect, offering the latest in technological support. Such a center would greatly aid the development of the 911 single emergency telephone reporting system. Officers could be detached from their various organizations and detailed to the Office of Civil Defense for the conduct of the activity. Plans for such a facility are already developed, and the committee recommends the promptest possible action toward this goal.

Summary

No change in basic structure of present fire service organization

Qualifications for petitioned annexation to IFD district, protecting the financial interest of volunteer departments

Shared facilities—training, fire presentation—in fire services

Elimination of petty bickering between IPD and MCSD

Establish principal of eventual consolidation of police services, so that two major law enforcement units do not evolve in this county

Immediate consolidation of basic support services—jail, record keeping, computer support, tactical and strategic planning

Policy of annexation of areas as they demonstrate, by modern reporting and analysis techniques, a need for intensive patrol services

Creation of a county-wide emergency communication center, under auspices of the Civil Defense office, to service IPD, IFD, and other fire or police units desiring to join.

RECOMMENDATION IV.

The directors, department heads, and office-holders of City-County Government shall be guided by the following policies:

- A. Automobiles shall be assigned by functional necessity rather than as a salary consideration.
