The Sewer Engineer made the following report :

INDIANAPOLIS, May 13, 1872.

To the Mayor and Common Council of the City of Indianapolis :

GENTLEMEN—According to the sewerage plan furnished by Mr. Lane, and adopted by the Council, the main sewer, which now terminates at the intersection of Kentucky avenue and Washington street, would extend up Washington to Winston street, thence north to Pogues' Run.

The construction of the sewer on the principal business street and main thoroughfare of the city will be a great annoyance to the citizens, and a serious injury to the business of the city. I believe the purposes for which the sewer is designed will be fully met by taking it from its present terminus up Illinois to Ohio street, thence east to Pogues' Run, terminating at the same point as by the other route. The cost of building the sewer would be less on Ohio than on Washington street, as the expense of taking up and relaying the Street railroad tracks and the bowldering would be avoided. Other changes which would become necessary would make the total cost about the same.

Should you deem it expedient to make this change, it should be done before the sewer on North Illinois street is commenced. Should the change not be made, it will be necessary to extend the main sewer to the east side of Illinois street, in order to make a permanent connection with the Illinois street sewer. The main sewer now stops on the south side of Washington street.

Notwithstanding what has been done, it may be well for the Council to examine into the expediency of making Pogues' Run the main sewer of the city.

Respectfully submitted,

J. W. BROWN,

Sewer Engineer.

Which was referred to a Special Committee, consisting of Councilmen Woodburn, Cottrell and Wiles.
