Superiority That's No Illusion
Two hundred years ago, this man reported a story so controversial, we're still publishing weekly updates.

James Madison did more than play a leading role in the Constitutional Convention of 1787. He also reported on it.

It was a monumental achievement. During four long months of impassioned debate, Madison spoke more frequently than almost any other delegate. Yet he also kept a detailed written report of every speech and every hard-fought compromise. Jefferson later called Madison's report “the ablest work of this kind ever yet executed...a labor and exactness beyond comprehension.”

Of course the story of the Constitution didn't end with the adjournment of the Convention. Our legal system is still changing, still evolving. The story that Madison first reported 200 years ago is now updated for you every week, in the pages of BNA's U.S. Law Week.

Law Week gives you an indispensable overview of the whole evolving body of U.S. law. In addition to complete coverage of Supreme Court proceedings, Law Week gives you a concise Summary and Analysis of each week's most important developments...digests of precedent-setting federal and state decisions...agency rulings...important new federal statutes...and more.

Each year Law Week's editors screen 25,000 decisions from federal and state courts, reporting those that set new precedents, present new perspectives on existing legal principles, or involve controversial issues.

In only a few minutes each week, Law Week keeps you abreast of current trends and lets you find new precedents and conflicting decisions—before these cases are reported in official case reporters.

Today Law Week builds your awareness of the broad legal context within which you will practice. You will soon find it even more indispensable, as you play your own role in the 200-year-old story that Madison first reported in 1787.

People who know law, know BNA.

The Board of Editors of the Indiana Law Review welcomes Dean Norman Lefstein to the Indiana University School of Law—Indianapolis. Dean Lefstein left his position as professor of law at the University of North Carolina to become Dean, effective January 1, 1988. After engaging in private practice in Chicago for several years, Dean Lefstein served as an Assistant United States Attorney, as a Project Director for the National Conference of Juvenile Court Judges, and as a staff attorney with the Deputy Attorney General of the United States. He has also served as Director of the Public Defender Service for the District of Columbia and has held visiting appointments at Duke University School of Law and Hebrew University in Jerusalem.

The Board of Editors would also like to acknowledge the work of Jeffrey W. Grove, who occupied the position of Acting Dean prior to Dean Lefstein's appointment. His leadership and dedication provided needed stability during a period of change at our school.
