Family In Law.

In 1933, BNA first published The United States Law Week. With that first issue, BNA set a new standard for high-quality legal reporting and research. Following Law Week's precedent, BNA has since launched a family of information services for legal professionals.

BNA's notification services cover key areas of the legal field. They include: BNA's Family Law Reporter. BNA's Bankruptcy Law Reporter. BNA's Securities Regulation & Law Report. BNA's Banking Report. BNA's Federal Contracts Report. BNA's Patent, Trademark & Copyright Journal. BNA's Criminal Law Reporter. And BNA's Electronic Information Policy & Law Report.

Whichever publication you choose, you'll notice the family resemblance — comprehensive, accurate, in-depth coverage.

Ask your professor for details on low student rates for BNA information services.

Indiana International & Comparative Law Review

The Indiana International & Comparative Law Review, published by the Indiana University School of Law—Indianapolis since 1991, is a student-edited law journal which provides a forum for the discussion and analysis of contemporary issues in public and private international law. The Review publishes articles by prominent legal scholars, practitioners, and policy makers from around the world, as well as student-written notes and comments.

The Review is published twice annually, with a periodic third issue devoted to a specific topic in international or comparative law. In 1994, in conjunction with the Italian Academy for Advanced Studies in America at Columbia University, the Review published a special issue on the political and social aspects of Italian law. In 1996, the Review published an issue addressing various aspects of Chinese law.

TRIBUTE TO PROFESSOR WALTER W. KRIEGER

DEBRA A. FALENDER*

Walter W. Krieger and I arrived at the Indiana University School of Law—Indianapolis at nearly the same time—he in the fall of 1971 as a first-time professor of property and agency law, and I in the fall of 1972 as a first-year law student enrolled in his Property I course. At that time, neither of us had any notion that our paths would be intertwined for the next twenty-five years.

For the entire first week of Property class in the fall of 1972, we discussed property rights in foxes pursued by hunters across a wasteland. The second week, we studied finders and keepers, and discovered that losers need not weep; and by the third week, we were ready to learn about property interests in buried treasure, bank notes on a window ledge, and rings in the mud at the bottom of a pool in the south of England. Many things were perplexing to us during the first few weeks of law school, but one fact was absolutely clear to me and to everyone else in that Property class—Professor Krieger was a wonderful, caring person, and we liked him and respected him immensely.

Twenty-five years later, the same fact remains absolutely clear—Professor Krieger is a wonderful, caring person, and we (his students and colleagues) like him and respect him immensely. In recognition of his teaching ability, the students voted him the recipient of the Black Cane Outstanding Professor Award in 1987. Recently, in 1997, the faculty honored him with a dinner and accolades on the occasion of his retirement. The Indiana Law Review, in this retirement tribute, also celebrates Professor Krieger's quarter-century career as a member of the faculty of the Indiana University School of Law—Indianapolis, and I am pleased to play a small part in that celebration, because Walter Krieger is my very special friend.

Walter Krieger was born, raised, and educated in Kentucky. He received his B.A. in 1959 from Bellarmine College in Louisville, and his J.D. (cum laude) in 1962 from the University of Louisville, where he was student editor of the Journal of Family Law and a member of the Phi Kappa Phi Honor Society and The Brandeis Society.

After completing law school, Krieger served as Judge Advocate in the U.S. Navy in Virginia and Hawaii, and ultimately was certified as a Military Judge by the Department of the Navy in 1969. Also in 1969, he received an LL.M. (with highest honors) in Public International and Comparative Law from the George Washington University National Law Center. Subsequently, he served in Washington, D.C., as the Assistant Head of the Law of the Sea Division in the Office of the Judge Advocate General of the Navy, until he resigned his regular commission as Lieutenant Commander in the U.S. Navy Judge Advocate General's Corps to accept a position on our faculty in 1971.

After such interesting experiences as prosecuting and defending clients in special and general courts-martial in Oahu, and advising the U.S. State Department during bilateral fisheries negotiations with Poland and the Soviet Union, one wonders what it was like to arrive in landlocked Indianapolis in 1971 to begin teaching Property Law to first-year law students. To Walter Krieger, it surely felt good. He had returned to his midwestern roots. One gets a good sense of this from the stories he shared with his students—not stories of naval malpractice investigations, military life, or Washington politics, but stories of Kentucky Ducks, Red-Eyed Hogs, and Three Little Orphans, stories that gave life to the concepts of precedent, stare decisis, and equity.

Between August 1971 and his retirement in December 1996, Walter Krieger taught agency law, military law and international law, but early on, the focus of his teaching, writing, and outside speaking was in the areas of property and probate law. In 1980, 1982, and then continuously from 1984 until his retirement, he wrote the annual survey of property law for the Indiana Law Review.<sup>1</sup> His survey pieces are a delight to read and reread. He often included a gentle, sometimes subtle commendation for a particularly well-written and tightly analyzed decision, and occasionally he could not resist a polite but not-so-subtle chiding when a court didn't get the analysis or the conclusion quite right. His consistent and thoughtful work in the annual surveys had an important positive effect on the course of Indiana property law.

Walter Krieger's special research focus was in landlord-tenant law, where he relentlessly prodded the courts and the legislature to revise and modernize Indiana law in accord with national trends. In a 1977 article, Krieger and his co-author, Michael Shurn, criticized the Indiana legislature for failing to enact modern landlord-tenant legislation, and then challenged the courts to assume the responsibility.<sup>2</sup> Later, in a 1986 article, Krieger lamented that neither the courts nor the legislature had risen to the task of injecting certainty and fairness into Indiana landlord-tenant law, and once again, he gently encouraged them to do so in the near future.<sup>3</sup>

Walter wrote bar review outlines and taught bar review courses in agency/partnership and trusts for many years, until his health began to get the better of him in the summer of 1994. He also regularly lectured to lawyers in continuing education seminars. He was very well-received as a speaker, because of his incredible knowledge of old and new cases and statutes, his delightful sense of humor, and his very pleasant demeanor, the very same traits that earned him the enduring respect of his law students over the years.

3. Walter W. Krieger, Housing Code Violations and Tenant Remedies, 19 IND. L. REV. 299, 322-23 (1986): "The application of the illegal contract doctrine to housing code violations and the recognition of an implied warranty of habitability in residential leases have replaced the old no duty to repair rule and the doctrine of caveat lessee. Nevertheless, in Indiana, the limited number of judicial decisions and the lack of legislation have left the scope of these new tenant remedies and landlord obligations uncertain."

Walter always wore a smile, even in the midst of the most tedious committee meeting. He always said yes when asked to chair a committee, or judge a moot court competition, or present a model class to parents at Family Law Day. Every year, he received numerous thank-you letters from various law school and community organizations, for the generous devotion of his time and expertise.

Perhaps Walt said yes too often. Health problems plagued him in the last few semesters of his teaching. I know there were days when he had trouble just walking to his classroom. But he persevered, with a trademark twinkle in his eyes and an uncommon ability to share an amusing anecdote and make people smile.

Walter is a family man. He has a close and loving relationship with his lovely wife Carolyn, and I have never known a father more proud of a child's accomplishments and talents. In prominent locations in his office, Walter always displayed with pride the artwork of his son, James Edward.

Walter Krieger leaves the law school following a distinguished career. I and Walter's many close friends on the faculty wish Walter and his family all the best in the years to come.
